Simon says it’s safe to vape.

Advertisers tell a good story.
E-cigs were developed to help cigarette smokers quit. Nice, right? But the colors, flavors, and techy nature of vaping devices, like Juuls, are appealing to non-smoking youth, too. As a result, young people are at increased risk for health concerns due to exposure to nicotine and vaping additives. If you haven’t started vaping, don’t start. The nearly four billion dollar vaping business in the U.S. is doing just fine without your support.
